2018 Community Partnership Award

Nomination Form

The University of Southern California (USC) Edward R. Roybal Institute on Aging fosters and recognizes excellence in research and community partnerships that further the needs of older persons, particularly those from underserved backgrounds.

The USC Roybal Institute Community Partnership Award recognizes practitioners who have fostered and excelled in establishing partnerships benefiting older persons, particularly those from low-income and multiethnic backgrounds. Individuals from the community, a community agency or a public agency whose creative efforts have developed and/or sustained aging programs or services benefiting the underserved are eligible for the award. The accolade is designed to showcase the impact and benefits that result from partnerships that lead to sustainable changes within the community.

Submission Information

Submission: Please complete one form per nominee. No person may self-nominate. Completed nominations are due by October 31, 2017. Submissions will only be accepted via email or fax.

Nominees will be contacted within five working days after nomination submission. Winners will be notified by December 1, 2017.

Criteria For Excellence

This accolade recognizes an individual from the community, a community agency or a public agency who has made a creative effort to develop and/or sustain aging programs or services that benefit elders from low-income and multiethnic backgrounds through (1) integrated and sustained activities that have created notable achievements through partnerships with relevant stakeholders that have incorporated collaborative problem solving, (2) engaged in work that has enhanced service delivery and the quality of life of older persons, and (3) deliberate focus on sustaining a partnership of trust, respect and commitment.
